Also note the use of black, cream or grey 'Grancotta' aka 'Grantex', popular in mid-C20th and as a wartime expedient, using fireclay when there was no access to Italian marble. Often found as freestanding urns, unmarked or with generic inscriptions, e.g. 'MOTHER'. (See: To Prove I'm not Forgotten, Sylvia Barnard)

Also Midland Brick and Terra Cotta Company, from Tamworth area (Polesworth and Coalville) used a light buff clay (Glypto-terracotta, e.g. sculptural) for headstones from late 1870s.
